MANILIUS, the Roman poet, once wrote, "The diamond is more precious than gold."

The truth of his remark is known to all of us. We repeat it only to show the high esteem in which the diamond was held as long as nineteen hundred years ago.

Today the diamond is still the gem of gems- the gift of gifts.

The School of Commerce All-star team are again champions of the Interfaculty Hockey League. Their last game, that against Dentistry, was won by default. This was regretable, for while Commerce were favored to win, they would much rather have played than taken the game in this way. The Commerce team, although composed almost entirely of freshmen, have played consistently good hockey, and even after losing two of their stars, were able to keep up their winning streak. They have had extremely hard opposition, as may be seen that, for a total of five games played, the Commerce team have scored 14 goals against their opponents 6. In one game, that against Science, the score was a 2—2 tie.

The Science team, which are runners-up in the league, have made a total of 11 goals, as against 9 scored by their opponents.

It would be extremely unfair to single out any particular player on the Commerce team as the outstanding star, for they have reached their position as league leaders by their good team work and combination more than by the stellar work of any individual.

"Jack" Hughes, of Commerce '22, was the manager of this year's champions, and a great deal of the credit is due to him, for his work in the capable handling of the team.

Paul Drummond guarded the nets for the Commerce team, and the ever reliable Paul played his usual game, which is all that is necessary to say. The fact that only six goals were scored against him in five games just about speaks for itself.

"Charlie" Robertson, of Commerce '24, played right defence, and played it well. Besides being an excellent blocker, Charlie had a habit of scoring the odd goal when it was needed.

"Gib." Goldie, another freshman, was Charlie's sparring partner on the defence, and the two of them were a hard combination to pass. "Gib." also proved a very annoying personage to the opposition by his fast rushes, and his excellent back checking.

Max Stearns started the season at centre for the champions, and was one of their leading goal getters. It was indeed regrettable that he was obliged to, leave college before the schedule was finished.

"Buster" Martin, of second year, took over the job of centre after Stearns left, and ably filled his shoes. "Buster" is small, but an excellent back checker, and rolled up a score of seven goals in the three games that he played at this position, which makes him the leading goal-getter.

H. Galley, another first year man, started out with the team at left wing, but he proved too good and graduated to the Juniors. Although the scoring column only gives him credit for one goal, he was nevertheless responsible for many more due to his feeding and combination work.

F. C. Murphy, of Commerce '24,

IMPORTANT MATTERS FOR DISCUSSION

Special Meeting of the Students' Society This Afternoon

AT THE UNION.

Summoned by the President by Special Request.

There will be a special meeting of the Students' Society this afternoon at 5.15. There are several important question which are to be discussed and it is expected that a large number of men will turn out.

The meeting was called by the President of the Students' Council at the request of some members of the Student body who desired a statement of council's financial position as a result of the publication of the Song Book. This is a most important question and there will no doubt be a good deal of discussion regarding it.

Another matter which is to be dealt with is an explanation as to why it was necessary to stop publication of the Daily for a few days this month. There has been a great deal of discussion on this question and explanation will undoubtedly do a great deal to clear up any misunderstandings which now exist and it is most desirable that these should be cleared up as soon as possible.

Any other topics which are brought up by the students will be dealt with as fully as possible. It is most probable that several important questions will be dealt with.

Any matters which can be settled at to-days' meeting will help materially to diminish the pressure of work which is always felt at the Annual meeting of the Students' Society. There are always a great many matters of routine to be handled at the Annual meeting, which is held sometime in March, and it is most desirable that anything which can be dealt with now should be brought up this afternoon. This will greatly facilitate matters.

SCIENCE ELECTIONS TAKE PLACE MONDAY

The election of officers for the Science Undergraduate Society will take place on Monday, March 5th. The officers are chosen as follows: The President and Vice-President are chosen from the third year, and the Secretary and Treasurer from the second. The Assistant Secretary from the first, and Reporter from the whole society. Nominations for these offices must be made in writing and signed by at least ten members of the Society. Any member may nominate a candidate provided his nomination is supported by nine other members.

LECTURES ON THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Mr. Bieler Explains Organization to Students of Economics.

ARTS GRADUATE.

An Explanation Rather than a Justification.

Yesterday morning, through arrangements made by the Department of Economics, the class of Arts '24 had one of its periods given over to the hearing of a lecture delivered by Mr. John Bieler, who placed before the students some of the workings of the League of Nations. Many besides the Second Year men and women were present, when Dr. Leacock introduced Mr. Bieler as a former undergraduate, following up the study of Political Science at McGill, and as one intimately acquainted with the organization of the League of Nations through his being a member of its Secretariat.

A summary is all that is possible of Mr. Bieler's discussion; he just made plain the fact that the idea of nations organizing for their own and common benefit is not one of purely recent origin. He cited several historic examples of such attempts as a more or less binding authority. Hugo Gratins was mentioned as being among the first strongly to advocate the necessity of the States observing certain rules and principles of warfare and peace.

The Caucus of Europe after the Napoleonic wars was a failure; nor was the inauguration of the Hague Tribunal noticeable for any outstanding successes. The proposal for something along the lines of what the League of Nations is supposed to be, was mooted in the British War Cabinet of 1916 by Lord Robert Cecil, whose remarks were later compiled by General Smuts, Woodrow Wilson urging with all the weight of his authority, the inclusion of the covenant of a League of Nations in the Treaty of Versailles. The League of Nations came into being when, on January 10, 1920, the Treaty was ratified by a sufficient number of powers. Contrary to popular opinion, Germany is eligible for membership in the League, but so far has failed to apply for admission.

Russia is, of course, barred because of the non-recognition of the present Soviet Government, by the great majority of States. The United States can automatically become a member of the League by ratifying the Treaty, as was done by all the other former belligerents.

The League of Nations is not a super-state; it is, rather, an association of nations, commonly agreeing to limit their freedom of action on certain points in order "to promote international cooperation and to achieve peace and security. The constitution provides, in the first place, for an Assembly to which the League members send three representatives, each State, however, having only one vote. There is also a Council, which, being composed of only 8 members meet at much shorter intervals, and transacts the greater part of the current business.

The fourth aim of the machinery of the League is the Permanent Court of International Justice, the constitution of which was approved by the First Assembly.

Mr. Bieler's lecture was most interesting from the point of view of a student of political philosophy. It was an explanation rather than a justification of the League of Nations.

MED. '26 VS COMM. '23 FOR CHAMPIONSHIP

The Championship of the interclass Baseball League will be decided this afternoon at 5.30 P.M. when Comm. '23 meets Med. '26.

Both teams have played a high class of ball during the season and an interesting game is expected. The Commerce team were winners last year but they have lost several men; the Medicos are noted for their heavy hitting and should give the Commercial men more than a run for their money.

Players will enter the High School by the Boy's Entrance only.

PHYSIOLOGICAL SOCIETY TONIGHT

Mr. Britton to Read Paper on "Cooling of Animals."

A regular meeting of the Physiological Society will be held in the Old Medical Building this evening, Tuesday, at 8 P.M.

Mr. Britton Cooper scholar in Physiology, who has been carrying on research work in the department this year, will read a paper on his work.—"The Cooling of Animals."—A demonstration of the effects of cooling Homoiothermic animals wil be made and some time will be devoted to a discussion of the hibernating animals of his crass.

Members of the society are reminded that books loaned at previous meetings are due this evening. It will greatly facilitate matters if members returning books will take them to the library on the third floor before coming to the lecture room.

After the lecture an opportunity will be given to borrow further from the library of the society.

All Medical students and others interested are invited to attend.

MECHANICAL CLUB WILL HEAR PAPER

Mr. G. S. Clarke Will Address Members To-night.

Mr. G. S. Clarke is giving a paper before the members of the Mechanical Club to-night on Power House Instruments. This subject is vitally important to the engineer for he must be able to know at any instant the exact condition of his apparatus. All would-be mechanical engineers should make it a point to come out and add to their stock of knowledge.

Mr. Clarke has spent some time in research work with one of the most outstanding firms in this line of business, and has prepared a paper of great technical interest. The subject matter will be fully illustrated on the screen.

After the lecture the members will have an opportunity to get acquainted, perhaps better than on visiting tours, round the tables in the reading room which will be stacked—no, not with dry technical journals, but modern refreshment.

Take advantage of the good impression that you made last week. An invitation to the Medical Dance will make a hit with her.

MARCONI CO. INVITES RADIO ASSOCIATION

This afternoon the Radio Association are visiting the Marconi Co. of Canada Ltd at their "works" at 173 William Street starting from Room 2 of the Physics Building. Men who are late may go direct to the plant.

The tour is given under the auspices of the Marconi Co. and an opportunity will be given to see the Wireless Telephone set which transmits the weekly concerts besides many things of general interest. All these outings are instructive and interesting to most students and there is still time to join the association and enjoy these advantages.

PLANS FOR RUGGER LEAGUE UNDER WAY

Constitution to be Submitted Soon

At the meeting of the English Rugby Club yesterday afternoon ,the subject of discussion was the formation of an Intercollegiate League.

A letter from the C. I. A. V., was read by the Secretary. This stated that the 'Varsity representatives to the C. I. A. V. had made a motion at their last meeting to the effect that an Intercollegiate English Rugby Union be formed. The C. I. A. V. informed the existing clubs at 'Varsity and McGill, asking them to submit a constitution before its next meeting.

All those present at the meeting were heartily in favour of the motion. After some discussion F. W. Bradshaw and A. N. Budden were appointed to draw up a constitution, and to submit it before the next meeting of the McGill club.

The next meeting will be held at the Union at 5.30 p.m. on Wednesday, 8th. March. It is hoped that as many members as possible, will be present.

MONTREAL, TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1922.

LET'S HAVE IT.

At the service held in the Union on Sunday under the auspices of the Student Christian Association, the speaker, philosophizing in the footsteps of the immortal Dante and Mr. Rudyard Kipling, made a very pregnant remark—a remark that might well be uttered with emphasis at the present time. "There is no room even in Hell," he said, "for the pale and the colourless, for the people of no opinions who sit on the fence and refuse to take sides."

This dictum, as enunciated at the time, had of course, a specific reference, but shorn of the particularly religious trend of the occasion, it has a certain value of its own. Fed up with Bolshevism, labour troubles and the like, the placid, hum-drum majority of the civilized world seem to have arisen in their wrath to try to lay the demon of discontent by repressing all manifestations of free speech or thought, whether by actual prohibitory measures or by other more subtle forms of inhibition. But this species of reactionary dictation by the "many-all-too-many" won't do in a university.

Insofar as the present repressive trend affects professors, Sir Robert Falconer, of the University of Toronto, has defined their rightful position in no uncertain terms. Speaking a week or so ago at a lecture on "Academic Freedom" delivered at Convocation Hall, he said in part, "in fact, a university in which professors are overawed by political, social or sectarian influence cannot aspire to an honourable position in the commonwealth of learning. Just as we measure the progress of democratic government by its freedom from the spoils system so that faithful servants are not disposed whenever a new party comes into power, so we can measure the rank and stability of a university by the security given to a professor t pursue and expound his investigations without being compelled to justify himself to those who differ from him." What a delicious challenge this makes for some of the narrow-minded dogmatists who are constantly wailing that our seats of higher education are breeding-places for radicalism and unorthodoxy.

The university student has, or should have, exactly th: same privilege of absolute liberty of expression, and what is more, he should make ample use of it. Even if nine-tenths of it should be "hot air," the result of inaccurate or insufficient knowledge, out with it.

The tenets and pronouncements of men such as Giordano Bruno, Martin Luther and Leibnitz, seem quite mild and innocuous nowadays, but had they not possessed the courage to brave the showers of anathemas hurled upon them by the "crowd" our civilization would possibly have been retarded to an appreciable degree. Above all let there be less squatting on the fence of colourlessness. It is rather difficult to go into ecstatic raptures over the idea of our several Canadian Universities, turning out an ever-swelling stream of young men, who are to be the future leaders of the multitude in thought and science, if the material for this "stream" shows a marked preference for basking in the shallows of acquiescence. It does not really matter what it is; make as sure as possible of your ground and then out with it. Above all, never mind the "crowd."

TO-DAY'S MEETING.

The special meeting of the Students' Society this afternoon should prove to be rather interesting. There are many important matters which will in all probability be discussed, and there appears to be a genuine attempt on the part of the undergraduates to learn all about the work of the Students' Council for the past year.

The two most important items of discussion during the past months have been the manner of handling the publication of the Song Book and the Daily. The greater number of the students do not know just what the position of the students' finances are, and they intend to find out this evening. It is certain that the financia' statement of the Society for the present session will not show as good a balance as that of last year, and the meeting to-night will give the students an opportunity of learning more about the present state of affairs than they could find out at a regular meeting, when the whole time is taken up with the presentation of reports and figures that have to be voted on before they are properly digested.

It is not to be thought that a special meeting is called for the sole purpose of answering questions. The Students' Council is not in a position where it carries on the affairs of the undergraduates and then dispenses information at request. The small body of men chosen to carry on the business of the Students' Society are placed there for convenience, and because the large number of students could not properly handle all of the business in their meetings. Because such a body has been created for convenience, however, it is no reason why the students at their meetings should not discuss plans for carrying on the business and stating their opinions concerning the proper manner of doing so.

If possible, the ideal way of conducting the students' business would be to have the whole body vote on every measure but, since that is impossible, it would certainly be advisable to have them express their opinion on the more important matters.

The publication of the Song Book and Daily are business matters that involve the expenditure of thousands of dollars, and it is important that everything should be thoroughly explained to the students and their opinions sought about the proper manner of handling them.

The men who are so anxious to have a meeting called are not doing so in the hope of being able to adversely criticize the administration of undergraduate affairs. They do feel, apparently, that there have been many important matters passed upon by the Students' Council, of which they are more or less ignorant, and they would like to have the uncertain feeling cleared away by a straightforward statement of affairs as they exist.

There are many matters which cannot be properly explained through the medium of the college paper inasmuch as they would receive undue publicity in this way. A meeting of the Society will serve to stop any unfounded rumours and, at the same time, create a greater interest in student activities in genral.

CORRESPONDENCE

The Daily is not responsible for the sentiments of letters published in the correspondence columns. Signed communication from graduates, undergraduates and members of the faculties will be placed in print if they are not of too great length.

Correspondents are requested to observe the unwritten law of the newspaper office — that they write upon ONE SIDE of the paper ONLY.

No communication will be admitted in this column without the name of the writer being attached, not necessarily for PUBLICATION.

Editor,
McGill Daily.
Dear Sir,

Permit me to use the columns of your paper to express my appreciation of the assistance which has been given me during the past hockey season.

I should like first to congratulate the Commerce Faculty Allstar team on the winning of the faculty championship for the second time. It is a feat of which they may well be proud and especially proud because they have played remarkably clean hockey throughout the entire season. Their games have been won by good teamwork and unselfish play and, I am sure, no one begrudges them their honors.

I feel that a great deal of the credit for the success of inter-mural hockey this year must be given to one who has graduated, namely Mr. Johnson, last years' manager. My work this year has been easy, in comparison to that which he carried out last year and this fact was due to the excellent organizing work done by him. I consider that Mr. Johnson deserves the thanks of all sport loving McGill students.

It would take too much space to enumerate all those who have helped me this year by their cooperation and assistance. The class managers, the faculty managers and the referees have all done their work efficiently, and have at all times given me their assistance, without which it would be impossible to succeed.

I do wish, however to thank Mr. J. R. Hughes of Commerce '22 for his help this year. He has acted as assistant manager throughout the entire season and his work has left nothing to be desired.

Also to Mr. Joe. Foubert, the caretaker of the rink, I extend my sincere thanks. His aid has been invaluable and should recommend that he be granted gratuity if such is possible.

To all those others who have helped me either by active participation or by advice. I am very thankful. I have been ably assisted on all sides and to this assistance is due in no small way, the success of the past season.

I extend my best wishes to the incoming Manager, Mr. G. B. Puddicombe Arts '23 and, knowing his ability, I feel confident that next year will be even better season for interclass and inter-faculty hockey.

With best wishes for the success of the intermural hockey in future years.

I remain,
Yours truly,
Clayton F. Elderkin,
Ex-Manager,
Class Hockey.

STORK DELAYS MED. MEETING LAST NIGHT

Dr. Little Spoke on History of Obstetrics.

NEW BUSINESS.

Very Interesting Paper Read at Medical Society.

The meds again turned out in force to hear Dr. Little address the Society on the History of Obstetrics. Dr. Little opened his remarks by apologising for his being late, that he had intended to arrive punctually, God willing, but found the stork was unwilling thi evening.

With many humorous anecdotes he traced the history of the science from its earliest records as far back as 350 B.C. when reference was made to it in the history of Egypt, also in the early times of the Bible. The extent of learning possessed by such early observers was a surprise to many present, from both Greek and Roman history.

In more modern times especially in France great advances were made and mortality was greatly reduced by the skill of men like Ambroise Pare and his students. His methods spread to England and constantly improved in detail down to the present time.

Mr. Ross expressed the appreciation of the meeting in a hearty vote of thanks to Dr. Little after which refreshments were served.

The attention of the Medical Students is drawn to the following amendments made to the constitution last year.

Chap. IV. Par. II.— Nominations for the officers from the Undergraduate body shall be made in writing, each nomination to be signed by ten members of the Society and handed to the Secretary who shall post them on the bulletin board at least one week before the date of ballot. (March 18th.)

Chap. IV Par. 1.— The Honorary-President and the two Councillors from the teaching staff shall be elected at the Annual Meeting by ballot.

Chap. IV, Par. 1.—The election of officers shall be held one week before the Annual Meeting by ballot (March 7th.)

It was decided that any tickets to the Medical Dance which are not bought by undergraduates in Medicine by noon to-day will be placed on sale for graduate Medicine and undergrads of other faculties.

Any undergrad or member of the profession desiring to attend is referred to the announcement in the "notices" column.

POLO TEAM TO PLAY VARSITY ON SATURDAY

With a two-goal lead in their favour the McGill Water Polo Team will journey to Toronto for a return game on Saturday afternoon. They outplayed Varsity in their last game and seem to be in line for the championship. After the hard practices of the last few days, the team are in good condition. This afternoon another practice will be held and all available men are asked to be on hand to give the intercollegiate walruses a good fight.

PHILOSOPHY.

The professional and commercial opportunities offered to students of Philosophy are not apparent toute a l'heure. Philosophers know of a certainty that they are truly such only when they cease trying to discover any immediately practical advantages in their pursuits. In this respect Philosophy is like Pure Science and the Arts; it differs from them, however, in that it shows in lesser degree the graded effects of partial performance. "The whole world," so to speak, "wheels into new formation;" that is, most often progress in Philosophy manifests itself in a re-orientation which organizes the elements and relations of life on a totally different plane of valuation. And in the light that clarifies and interprets hitherto murky details, there prets ultimately a no less important material justification that can be discovered in the perfection of technique within a given field.

There is nothing which cannot be utilized by the student of Philosophy and the complete philosopher is one who has not only studied everything but experienced it as well. From vamp to saint, from gaping fool to statesman and genius, the whole human gamut supplies materials and laborers for the philosophical quest. More particularly a thorough training in the natural sciences and social disciplines is prerequisite to that reflective type if thought which passes from the news item to the editorial page and there constructs the world, not as it is, but as it ought to be The current conception of the philosopher as one who gazes at the stars and falls in the ditch, is not historically true. Most of the first rate philosophers were mechanics, merchants, officials, scientists, educators; their theories were derived from their pursuits. The organization of these activities and studies with reference to an enquiry into physiological, experimental and social psychology is especially pertinent to an understanding of Philosophy. In general, however, there is less importance to be attached to the subject matter of the preparatory studies than to the thoroughness, in extent and profundity, with which these content subjects have been attacked.

The world is in need of two types of men and women that it does not have in great abundance; those who are experts in technique, who contribute the 95 per cent of perspiration necessary to carry on the world's work well; and the inspired 5 per cent. who can see with broad enough vision what work there is to do. It is the latter who anticipate most of the possibilities and troubles of humanity by directing human efforts through the channels that a sufficient time-span of memory and imagination alone can discover or construct. In this practical age we are insisting that the philosopher come down out of the mountain tops into the market place, and that he there recognize hand and heart as well as soul and brain. Granted that this shift in emphasis is in the right direction, relative values must be so conserved as still to effect the main purpose of Philosophy; to introduce deliberation, breadth of view, and productive insight into the thought processes that are engaged with human problems, in order finally that we might have "life more abundantly."

PEPYS AT McGILL

Monday, Feb. 27th. Up with a slight touch of the megrims, which I would attribute to the generall closeness of the air at the sermonizing of yesterday, wherefrom I take it that it would at length have profited me more to have gone for the further breathing of freshe ayre upon the mountain-top. Many rumours came to my cares this day anent the greate meeting of the Generalle Student Guild that they would summon tomorrow in the greate hall of our Union, and some saying that there will be a greate uproare and a confusion, and others that not so much as one nose of one student will protrude round the doorway of the place where the Guild doth intend to assemble, and, from what I have learned in a short span of the demeanour of my fellowes, this last is as most like as any, but, Lord, what a shame and a scandalle it would be if this probe did come to naught, there being so many affaires of late whereof the the students have had no true reckoning, or so men do say.

A lady, selecting a hat, asked cautiously:

"Is there anything about these feathers that might bring me into trouble with hte Bird Protection Society?"

"Oh no, madam," said the milliner.

"But did they not belong to some bird?" persisted the lady.

"Well, madam," replied the milliner pleasantly, "these feathers are the feathers of a howl; and the howl, you know madam, seein' as 'ow fond 'e is of mice, is more of a cat than a bird.

Father: "Is the teacher satisfied with you?"

Tommy: "Oh, quite."

Father: "Did he tell you so?"

Tommy: "Yes; just the other day he said to me, "If all my scholars were like you, I would shut up my school this very day." That shows I know enough."

Our Little Tin Gods

(The "Daily" is running a series of pen pictures of the more prominent men in various student activities. These are being contributed by a fellow-student whose several years' attendance at McGill have afforded him an opportunity of making the personal acquaintance of most of the subjects of his articles. While these will be published anonymously, the "Daily" guarantees that no advantage will be taken of that fact to print anything that might injure the feelings of any student or render his relations with the paper less cordial.)

My Little Tin God for today is "Hammy" Hamilton. He was unanimously elected to that position last Saturday and has been complaining about it ever since.

Hammy is somewhat of a wanderer having made stays of a more or less permanent nature on several parts of the globe. England and Canada have been his favourite resting places but he visited France for a few years during the recent hostilities in that country. As far as Canada is concerned, it is hard to give him any fixed abode. Winnipeg and Quebec have each claimed his attention for periods, while Toronto has not been overlooked by him. For the present he divides his time between the latter city and Montreal, having his official residence here.

Bishops College School and Lower Canada College both stood for him for a short time and he acquired quite a reputation at both places as a track and harrier man, being entered in distances ranging from four hundred and forty yards to ten miles. He entered Medicine at McGill and straightaway began to look for some place to run here. His first public appearance came when he tried to smash a few of the records in an indoor meet held at the Craig street drill hall in the spring of 1919.

When the intercollegiate athletics began the following fall, Tom Graydon, the coach, was looking for the man who had made the name the year previous and was not sure that he would live up to his advance notices. However, Hamilton did this with a vengeance. In the intercollegiate track meet held here in the fall of 1919 he won the half mile, mile, and three mile events on the same afternoon, and was largely responsible for the fact that McGill walked away with the championship. Since that time he has been a familiar figure on McGill track teams and also featured in the snowshoe races last winter by carrying off several events and winning one Canadian championship. He also was a member of the Harrier team for a few years.

After fooling around with a few vice-presidencies, which positions were not at all active enough for him, he soon found himself running two or three organizations at the same time. Within a few days he had been chosen head of both the Track and Harrier Clubs, and was also given an office in the intercollegiate track executive. The other offices naturally followed and, when he was elected President of the Athletic Association last spring, it was generally conceded that he would occupy the position of President of the Students' Society this spring. When the acclamation was announced on Saturday, the new President was the only man to be surprised that no one had chosen to oppose him.

The Students' Council will find itself headed with a man who knows the work pretty thoroughly and will not be afraid to act. "Hammy" Hamilton may be charged sometimes with too quick action but never with inaction.

Today's Tin God does not need much description for the greater part of the students as he is personally known to a very large number and his appearance is familiar to the rest. He is in his junior year Medicine and will graduate in 1922 after having gone through a thorough course in student administration.

THE IDEAL COLLEGE MAN.

What is your opinion of the ideal college man? Does he exist or is he merely an ideal? Many heated discussions have taken place over the answers to these questions.

The women of Drake University settled this question by a questionnaire. Results showed their ideal to be as follows. How does this compare with your ideal:

1.—He must make a good appearance, but need not be handsome.

2.—He must be careful in personal appearance, but not a "dandy."

3.—He must be jolly, accommodating, considerate, and a true sportsman.

4.—If an athlete and meeting other requirements, so much the better, but if not athletic it need not detract.

5—He must be a good conversationalist, and realize that a girl is not flattered by having nonsense talked at her all the time.

6.—He must show respect and reverence to the aged.

7.—He must show the same gentlemanliness with men as with women.

8. —He must not sit serenely in the street car while an old man or an old woman stands and then arise suddenly and offer a seat to a pretty girl.

9.—He must not drink or smoke or be guilty of the attendant evils. These were most vigorously denounced.

10.—He must not sneer at religion or joke lightly about it.

11.—The young women recognize no difference in standards for women and declare such distinctions as false.

12.—The young women can only truly respect those men who live by principle and not by others' opinion.

13.—The young women recognize the young woman's influence over the young man's conduct, but do not hold the young woman responsible for the young man's conduct.

14.—The young women expect respect for their opinions and respect for the things which others esteem, and they admire reverence for religion.

15.—The women want the same dignity and reserve in the men that the men expect and ask for in them.

A man overtaking two friends heard his own name mentioned and asked what it was they were saying of him.

"Well" answered one "to tell the truth we were disputing as to whether you are a fool or a rogue"

Taking an arm of each he said:

"I think I can best settle that. I am something between between the two."

GYMNASTIC CLUB SHOWS PROMISE

Wicksteed Competition and Intercollegiate Meet Coming.

The Gymnastic Club are working hard for their coming competitions. Next Saturday the annual Wicksteed Competition will be run off, and the following Saturday a team of five men will meet Varsity in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium for the Intercollegiate championship.

This year R.M.C. were going to enter a team, but owing to a change in their curriculum have found it impossible to compete. Varsity has a strong team, but the Red and White are conceded more than a fifty-fifty chance of winning. McGill has four of last year's team back, and they have been training faithfully since last October, and are in wonderful shape. Paul Scott, the intercollegiate champion, has been showing exceptional form, and T. A. Holland, also of last season's team, has improved immensely, and is considered one of the best men in the college in his line of work.

The Wicksteed Competition is causing the excitement at present for the gymnasts. The choice of the team will depend to a certain degree on the showing of the men in this contest. At present six men are likely candidates for the five positions:—Paul S. Scott, J. R. Delahay, T. A. Holland, Consiglio, Rollesten, and McLetchie. The first four are practically sure of their old places, and the fifth man will very likely be Rollesten or McLetchie.

The meet with Varsity will take place in the morning and evening of March 11th. The competition will be supplemented by other features, and as the Leader Corps of the provincial Y.M.C.A. are holding their yearly meeting at the same time, a very successful competition is expected.

SHORT STORIES BY UNDERGRADUATES

Princeton Professor Gives Views on Students' Fiction.

There is no doubt, I suppose, that the verses written by college students more often represent a real accomplishment than do the stories. There are various causes for this, some of which are a part of youth and unchangeable, some easily removed by the fulfilment of certain conditions. As things are, both the younger and the older readers of undergraduate publications are inclined to sniff or sneer at the fiction. Which is a pity.

My observation of the stories written here during the past 15 years and more persuades me that college students can write very interesting short stories if they will take the necessary pains. I have often been astonished by the fertility of imagination, particularly in thinking out ingenious plots and odd characters, shown by men who have been required to write a fixed number of stories in the course of a term. I have been further encouraged by the ease with which the writers have caught the critical suggestions made to them and have been able to transform incoherence into readable narrative. The chief difficulty with unguided efforts, I make out, is that the authors are too prone to consider a page once written as sacred. In other words, they rest in wonder at the end of the creative hour, and think their work is good when it is really just begun.

Good stories—a large number of good stories—have been written in Princeton during the last decade, to my personal knowledge. Some of them have appeared in the Lit, though it is a deplorable fact that much of the best work has not been represented.

It isn't simply a matter of stories. The plain truth is that for many years the Lit has not adequately represented the intellectual life of the university. The editors have tried, little groups have tried, to make it do so; but they have not had the support of their fellows. I am not ashamed of what the magazine has been, and is. I am ashamed only that Princeton men have been content to see their real ability and real interest so imperfectly expressed. Princeton undergraduates are capable of putting out a magazine that could be read with pleasure by anybody. But unless scores of manuscripts are submitted instead of half-dozens ,and unless everybody who can afford to go to one or two games a year will help pay for it, we shall continue to have publications that may be very worthy but does us no real honor.

From a boy's essay. "The cammil is a sheep of the desert. It does not have to get angry to get its back up because nature made it that way. When cammils go on a journey they drink as much water as to last many days. Such animals are called aquiducks."

The man who waits for opportunity and when he sees it, takes it, is not so good a man as he who does not wait, but makes it. If I were asked what is lacking in the majority of men, I should say initiative, coupled with judgment. By the power of the former a man is impelled to do things and may be turned into stepping-stones to success. Many men fail because they fear to attempt.

ALL STARS SERIES WON BY COMMERCE

was the regular right wing man, and played his position well. "Murph" had a wicked shot and was a good feeder. He has also been flirting with a position on the Junior team.

A. O. Gilpin played one game at left wing, after Galley went up, and showed good prospects for next year.

"Freddie" Lazier, of 3rd year, was the all-round utility man, and during the season played every position on the team except goal. "Freddie" has weight, and knows how to use it, which made opposing players a little cautious of running into the husky football star.

"Monty" Montgomery, of second year, played as utility defence man, and during his time on the ice caused his opponents many an anxious moment by his spectacular rushes.

This is the second year that Commerce have won the championship, and they are especially to be congratulated because only two of the regulars from last year's championship team were available this year. Of this year's team Drummond is the only regular who is graduating, and with a new freshman class to draw from they have very good prospects for next year.

A notable incident in regard to this year's champions is that they have only drawn one penalty during the whole season, and that was a minor one. This year's hockey has been marked by clean playing on the part of all teams, duep artially to the new penalty rules, and a great extent to the capable referees which were appointed by the faculty managers.

The games have all been close, and not one game has resulted in a runaway. The leading scorers of the league are as follows:—

H. A. Martin, Commerce ...	7
Bailey, Macdonald	5
Parlow, Medicine	5

The league is now finished, and all practice hours are cancelled, but if teams desire to play exhibition games they may arrange hours by applying to the Manager.

G. B. Puddicombe, of Arts '23, has been elected as manager for next year, and will, without doubt, successfully carry on the work which has progressed so favorably during the past years.

MANY GRADS. OF M.H.S. AT McGILL

Class of '18 Gathered at Reunion.

Last evening forty graduates and masters of the class of '18 met in the Montreal High School in a reunion which will make a lasting impression. It was an occasion which brought many young men back four years to the days when they were the bane of more than one teacher, in their schoolday careers. Masters and past pupils of this old institution greeted one another with a spirit of such good fellowship that the re-occurrence of this memorable event will certainly be a reality.

The regathering was of a strictly informal nature, with Marcel Gaboury, a past senior prefect of the High, and now a member of Arts '22, as chairman. Before commencing the programme Prof. Holt read an appropriate selection, in a manner which only he can do to the satisfaction of his past scholars.

Dr. Dixon, the rector, welcomed the "old boys" back with enthusiasm, expressing his delight at the large number present, many of whom are now students of McGill University.

Prof. Holt was many times encored. His elocution awakened multitudes of thoughts of past occasions when the youthful audience had been arrayed before his presence under different circumstances. Mr. Allan McGarry entertained with several songs the last of which were as welcome as the first.

Each member of the teaching staff present was given an opportunity to say a word of greeting, and in each case used it, with a sense of humour touching on reminiscences of former days to the amusement of the class.

Previous to the close of this enjoyable meeting, refreshments were served in the High School Cafeteria where groups of interested chums listened to endless tales.

Among the masters present were:—Dr. Dixon, Messrs Gammel, Christie, McNicly, McFee, Skinner, Rexford, McBain, Bott, McGarry.

The graduates attending included:—Leslie Parsons, S. A. Wright, J. C. Antliff, P. Boronow, H. Ballon, L. K. Anderson, C. Fraser, F. O. Peterson, Maurice Gaboury, Marcel Gaboury, W. F. Macklaier, B. Alexander, S. Harris, Goldenberg, L. Grant, W. D. Dickie, W. Munro, Drummond, B. Weldon, I. Blackman, I. Gurman, N. Egerton, V. Lidstone, Horenberg, Enzer, Resper, W. R. Kennedy.

AT THE THEATRES

ORPHEUM.

The new Orpheum Players are now firmly established in the estimation of a large public, and their offering this week can do nothing but enhance an already enviable reputation. "Three Live Ghosts," is perhaps the finest thing they have yet achieved. For a real live rib-tickling sure-fire comedy, this play as presented at the popular uptown house would be hard to beat. The story of the three war-worn heroes—Jimmy Gubbins, the Cockney; "Spoofy," the shell-shocked unknown; and William Jones, the mysterious American with a past—who return to a world which had been content to consign them to oblivion is one replete with farcical situations which the authors have endowed with a witty dialogue, and from which the caste extract every possible laugh. The result is that the audience is kept in almost continuous paroxysms of laughter.

The acting of Miss Janes Stewart as the loquacious Mrs. Gubbins deserves the highest praise. It is a performance which combines rare insight with a keen sense of humour, and in presenting her sketch of a London coster woman Miss Stewart affords Montreal theatre-goers an opportunity of witnessing one of the funniest and finest character studies seen on the local stage for a long time. Mr. William H. Townshend as her step-son, Jimmy Gubbins, plays a somewhat similar role with almost equal success. Mr. Townshend has got the accent, attitude, and gesticulation of the typical Cookney down to perfection, and he uses his talent as a high-gear laugh inducer with hilarious results. Mr. Frank Joyner, as the artless kleptomaniac "Spoofy" is another whose performance left nothing to be desired. Miss Virginia Richmond as Miss Woofers and Mr. John McCabe as a detective must also be specially mentioned.

"Three Live Ghosts" is preceded by a one-act playlet entitled "Extravagance" which affords Miss Phyliss Gilmore and Mr. David Herblin an opportunity for some fine emotional acting. It is a clever little playlet with a genuine thrill and an ingenious twist in its tail. Go and see it for yourself. It is a fitting prelude for the fine comedy which follows.

PRINCESS.

The bill presented this week at the Princess is particularly pleasing. It is well balanced and lacks that sameness which has been characteristic of several performances throughout the season.

The act worthy of the "Starspot" is that one presented by Gus Edwards and his company. This Popular American Composer, Producer, manager and Star-maker has apparently made it a hobby of gathering in all the promising young stars which came to his notice, and each of his proteges in his or her part acquitted themselves nobly. His latest find Sandy, whom he picked up at Ellis Island just as the immigration authorities were sending him back to his native land, is a young Scotch and who has been dubbed. "The Wee Harry Lauder." Sandy's repertoire includes many of the famous Harry's favorites, and the little fellow put them across in a manner all his own.

Chester Frederick, Nat Eisman and the Connor twins, all youngsters, each performed with an aptitude rarely seen even in older actors. The other members of the company which includes a chorus of ten members, added to the success of the act in more ways than one.

Teschows Cats, another of those well trained animal acts, was a remarkable exhibition of feline intelligence, the antics of the renegade member of the troupe causing a great deal of mirth.

Wylie and Hartman held the attention of the audience for a few minutes in a skit in which the main idea was that worn out topic of "Before and After." Clever acting was the feature of the one-act play known as "The Bide a Wee House" by Claude and Fannie Usher, while Bobbe and Nelson in a comedy conception with songs entitled "His Girl" sang in a truly "vodavilian" manner.

In the final act of the well rounded out performance Herbert and Dave gave an excellent interpretation of "strong arm stuff" which they call "Athletic Simplicity." A Burton Holmes travelogue completes a very interesting performance.

THE CAPITOL.

It is one thing to sit in the soft seats at the Capitol; it is another to have friend with you but it is infinitely better to couple these with a good all-round bill. One is safe in calling the Capitol entertainment a well balanced production for the current week since each act is worthy.

The instructive film "Boomerang Bill" is in itself a revelation of the queer characters which modern life produces: it has the virtue of benevolence but sorely lacks that of justice. It is a picture pointing out the motive which leads a young man to the criminal court when he is intrinsically not a "bad personality."

Charlie Chaplin has always a popular reception. In "A Dog's Life" he offers an excellent fountain of mirth: a source of laughter which has a humourous side. In this comedy he has appeared hitherto in Montreal playhouses but nevertheless his encore is decidedly welcome and has its original claim... success.

The Capitol Orchestra caters to the patrons with a musical inclination. The overture this week is of a standard that Don't allow any obstacle to keep you from the Medical Dance.

If you can't dance, take lessons.

If you have no dress suit, borrow one.

OBSTACLES WERE MADE TO BE OVERCOME.

Willie was in a bad temper. His mother had just discovered that there was not a clean nightshirt ready for him to wear.

"Never mind Willie," she said consolingly, "You will have to put on one of your sister's nightgowns tonight."

"What! a girl's?" snorted Willie, drawing himself up haughtily.

"Yes. Why not?" asked mother in surprise.

"I won't wear it!" declared the small boy. ("I'd rather go to bed raw!"

appeals to all, being given, with feeling and precision.

Excerpts from "Thais" is a part of the programme which tends to add the necessary attraction setting off a good presentation from the mediocre.

A man reported to his friends that a lecture which he had delivered the evening before had proved soothing, rousing, and satisfying to his audience.

His sceptical comrades jeeringly demanded an explanation, which was given in the following terms:—

"It was soothing, for half the folks fell asleep; it was rousing, for the other half got up and went away; and it was satisfying, as they all declared that they wished never to hear that man again."

SHACKLETON TO BE BURIED IN SOUTH

Body of Explorer Leaves Montevideo for So. Georgia

Funeral guns boomed in Montevideo as the body of Sir Ernest Shackleton, the British explorer, was carried aboard the British steamer Woodville, which will take the dead explorer on his last voyage into Antarctic seas.

Salutes again were fired as the ship, with the Union Jack flying at half-mast, soon after noon passed into the harbor, where she will remain until starting on the ten-day voyage to South Georgia, where the explorer died on January 5, and where, in accordance with the wishes of Lady Shackleton, his body will be buried.

The highest honors Uruguay could pay, except those for a dead President, were rendered to the memory of the explorer by the Government and people as they surrendered temporary custody of the body, which was taken to Montevideo from South Georgia January 29 with the intention of conveying it to England.

The British Government also through its legation here, paid tribute to Sir Ernest's memory, and on his coffin was placed a wreath from King George. Another wreath came from the American Legation. A wreath with the inscription "To the Boss from the Boys" was ordered by the explorer's companions who are now in the Antarctic. Still another came from Lady Shackleton, bearing the words "The Boss," the name by which he was most intimately known.

Bronze Wreath From Uruguay

There was also a bronze wreath from the Uruguayan Government, which will remain permanently on Sir Ernest's grave, and there were many similar offerings from scientific institutions in England and other organizations.

All the members of the Diplomatic Corps, as well as representatives from the British and American colonies were present at the funeral ceremonies. Just before the services began President Brum of Uruguay visited the church to pay his respects. Canon Blount of Montevideo conducted the services, and Canon Brady of Buenos Aires delivered an address of tribute, during which he referred to Sir Ernest as a "great, loyal-hearted Irishman."

The flags which were half-staffed throughout the city when the body was brought from the military hospital to the English church, remained so during the forenoon while the funeral services were held. Stores were closed and the people flocked to witness the imposing funeral cortege from the church to the pier where the Woodville was moored.

The body, lying in the rough hewn coffin made in South Georgia, was transported through the principal streets to the pier on a gun carriage, preceded by a platoon of Uruguayan sailors and escorted by a company of cavalry. It was followed by a long procession, headed by British Charge d'Affaires Hope Vere and Uruguayan Foreign Minister Buero. British war veterans resident in Montevideo were conspicuous in the procession, which included several British women.

Several crack regiments of Uruguayan soldiers lined the sidewalks, and stationed at intervals were military bands, which played funeral marches. Thousands of citizens joined the procession, which grew to proportions seldom seen in Montevideo. Hundreds of women, seated in balconies, threw flowers on the gun carriage as it passed.

Additional thousands massed at the pier when the cortege arrived. The arrival was marked by a salute from the fortress on Mount Cerro, overlooking the harbor. Foreign Minister Buero here delivered an address eulogizing the explorer, and the British Charge replied.

Shackleton's body will be buried in the graveyard of the English Church at Grytviken, South Georgia, a little whaling village which looks out on the Antarctic Sea from a bay surrounded by towering hills, which are almost always snow-covered.

"Like all great explorers," said Charge Vere in his address, "Shackleton desired, if he fell in the struggle for new and important discoveries in the interests of humanity, like explorers and soldiers on the field of battle, to rest where he fell."
